Preliminary Notices.

THE commencement of the third year since the establishment of the CAMBRO-BRITON imposes on us the pleasing task of renewing to our readers and correspondents the expression of our gratitude for their friendly and unabated support.

We have to thank our Droitwich correspondent for his kind letter.—With respect to the “CAMBRIAN PLUTARCH,” however, we much fear, the scheme he suggests would not answer. In the first place, we have no favourable opinion of publishing by subscription; and, even if we thought differently on this point, our confidence in the patriotic spirit of our countrymen, we are sorry to say, would be hardly sufficient to justify the experiment.—As to the projected “Collections for a new History of Wales,” by Mr. Edward Williams, we have heard nothing of them since we published the notice in our third Number; we conclude, therefore, that the undertaking is abandoned.—The Numbers of the CAMBRO-BRITON, about which our correspondent enquires, may be had at our Publishers’, through the medium of any bookseller in the country.

As IEUAN has also our thanks: he will find that we have attended to his hints. We shall always be glad to hear him, under whatever name.

We greatly regret, that an attentive reconsideration of P. B. W.’s two contributions has not justified the hope we expressed in our last. Unfortunately, we have not room now for farther explanation, and can only repeat generally, what we have often before said, that our aim is rather to inform strangers, than to gratify the mere Welsh reader: verbum sat. It is in our correspondent’s power, we know, to oblige us by communications more congenial with our plan.

The very able Address, delivered at Brecon by the Rev. W. J. Rees, is unavoidably postponed until next month. Its length, and that alone, has precluded its appearance in the present Number.

Our Swansea correspondent will find such part of his wish, as we had not anticipated last month, attended to in this Number. We thank him for reminding us of the “Cornish Play,” a specimen of which we will endeavour to insert in our next.

We hope next month to resume the translation of the Laws of Hywel Dda.

BRAWD DEWI has just arrived, and (notwithstanding his metamorphosis) shall appear in our next.

Derbynniasom lythyr Cymraeg “AP SHERYPHUM” (Qu. Ap Humphreys ?) yn cwynaw yr arverwn, ar droion, y Lladin ac iethoedd ereill nad ydynt ddeallus iddo. Er ateb, nid oes gannom ond dywedyd, mai mewn pob achosion tebyg à raid ei ddywedyd, mai ar y darllenydd y mae deall yr hyn à ysgrivenom, ac nid i ni ddysegynt i lawr at ei amgylfred ev. Dywedwn hyn heb amcanu dim yn gyveiriadawl at ein gohebydd; eithyr, yn y gwrthwyneb, am ei syniad ev y drolchwn yn barchusav.
